SANDOSHAM MEDALLIST 1991

DR. MULKIT SINGH, BSc (Hons), Ph.D

Dr. Mulkit Singh, as an Associate Professor in the Department of Microbiology, Faculty of Medicine, National University of Singapore, is one of the leading parasitologists in the Southeast Asian Region.

He was graduated from the University of Singapore with BSc Hons in 1963 and completed his PhD in the field of immunology of hookworm infections in 1966.

He has to date published 55 and 18 scientific papers in international journals and regional/local journals respectively, 25 conference papers and 4 contributions to books, etc.

He serves on the Editorial Boards of the Southeast Asian Journal of Tropical Medicine and Public Health, and Tropical Biomedicine.

He is a founder member of the society and has contributed immensely through service in various capacities. For the significant contributions Dr. Mulkit Singh has made to the scientific community and the Malaysian Society of Parasitology and Tropical Medicine. It is indeed appropriate that he is awarded the Sandosham Medal.
